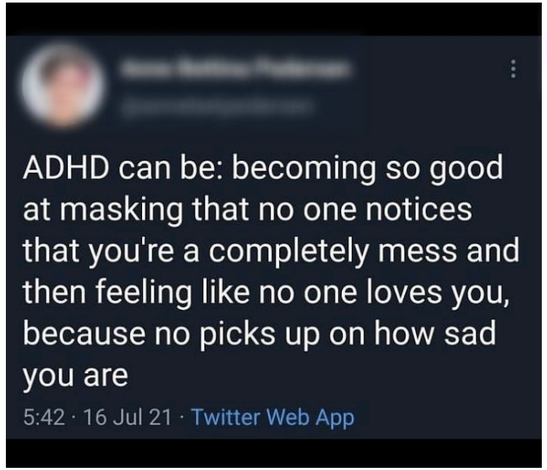
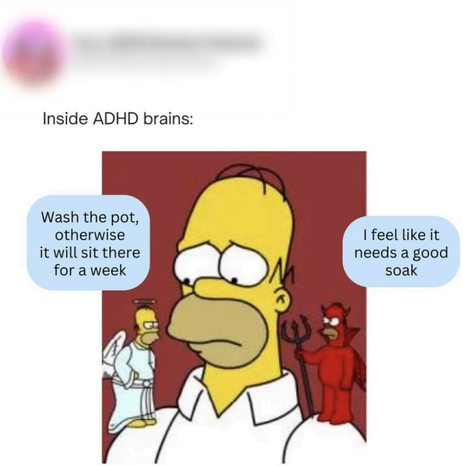
"In adults, there is another problem: ADHD symptoms become internalised. If someone has always been forgetful, deviant, unpunctual, conflicting, then one adopts these symptoms as personality traits rather than symptoms of a disorder that could be treated."
Yes. It's brutal. 😥

(a)



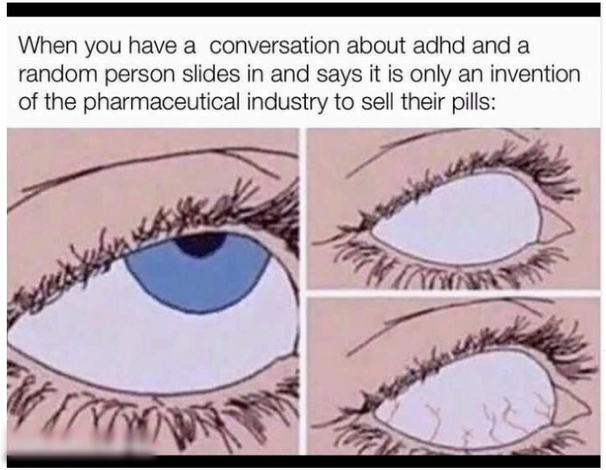
ADHD can be: becoming so good at masking that no one notices that you're a completely mess and then feeling like no one loves you, because no picks up on how sad you are
5:42 · 16 Jul 21 · Twitter Web App

(b)



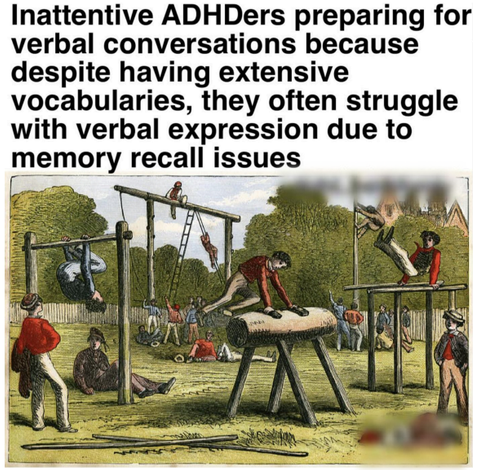
Inside ADHD brains:
Wash the pot, otherwise it will sit there for a week
I feel like it needs a good soak

(c)



When you have a conversation about adhd and a random person slides in and says it is only an invention of the pharmaceutical industry to sell their pills:

(d)



Inattentive ADHDers preparing for verbal conversations because despite having extensive vocabularies, they often struggle with verbal expression due to memory recall issues

(e)